EDITORIAL.

OUR Football Season proved a very interesting one, and if the first team results were rather disappointing, the unbeaten records of our two junior sides point to a bright future. Never have we had so many promising players in the lower School. We congratulate D. H. Tovey and F. J. P. Snook on being selected to play in the Public School holiday matches arranged by the A.F.A.; the former played against Ibis F.C., and scored the only goal for his side, and the latter kept goal against the Bank of England side. The form of both was favourably commented upon by the daily press.

In addition to our very successful breaking-up performances recorded elsewhere, we had two very pleasant evenings' entertainment during the term. The first was a lantern lecture on Tangier and Andalusia, by the Rev. G. F. Naylor; and the second a lecture-recital on "David Copperfield," by the Rev. A. R. Rannels-Moss. Both were thoroughly enjoyed by all who heard them.

FOOTBALL.

Our team was made up as follows:—F. J. P. Snook (goal); L. J. Willis and E. H. J. Southon (backs); T. E. Thorne, R. M. Law and R. R. Matthews (halves); F. C. Imber and R. J. Gray (right); C. G. F. Hazell, captain (centre), W. E. Thomas and D. H. Tovey (left).

FOOTBALL.

QUITE a large fixture list had been prepared for the Christmas term, but, unfortunately, owing to weather and illness, no less than eleven matches had to be scratched, viz., four 1st XI., four 2nd XI., and three "under 14." We were particularly unlucky in not being able to welcome the Hon. Artillery Company down again; owing to their injuries we lost a very valuable lesson.

As only four of last season's colours remained, and also as there had only been one second eleven match in 1927, there was not much to guide in the selection of two elevens. This, however, was not altogether a disadvantage, for as there were seven places to fill in the first eleven, all those who had the slightest chance of a place played very hard indeed in order to secure the honour of representing the School.

The defence caused very little worry. L. J. Willis was the obvious choice to partner C. G. F. Hazell. R. M. Law, R. R. Matthews and E. J. Thorne quickly established themselves as the halves, but the forward line caused a good deal of worry, or at least the choosing of the three insides did. Only two boys, A. Brickell and J. A. Wakefield, showed any signs of ball control, and they were both too small to be successful with such fast outsides as F. C. Imber and D. H. Tovey. W. E. Thomas was tried, and kept his place by hard work, and the final line was not decided until after the Old Boys' match, when E. H. J. Southon, who played right back instead of C. G. F. Hazell (hurt), did so well that he stayed there, the latter player coming to centre forward.

Taken as a whole the season was very successful; altogether, twenty matches were played, of which fourteen were won, one drawn, and five lost.

Of the 1st XI. matches, that against the Old Shastonians was undoubtedly the best. The game was fast throughout, and no quarter was asked or given. The O.S. started off very well, scoring their first goal within a minute, and a second five minutes later. Then the School started, and scored four goals straight off; however, they were not allowed to hold their lead for long, for the O.S. then had a turn and scored three more; so that at half-time the score was 5-4 in the O.S. favour. Soon after half-time the O.S. scored a sixth, and although the School pressed hard they could not score, and from a break-away the O.S. brought their total to seven. The School did not lose heart, and continued to press, and managed to score two more before the end. For the School, F. J. P. Snook played well, two saves being particularly good. L. J. Willis and E. H. J. Southon had a lot of work to do, and both defended very well. R. M. Law played his best game of the season at centre half, and the forward line also gave their best display. The remaining 1st XI. matches emphasised the Jack of scoring forwards, the defence doing quite well. Against Weymouth, at Shaftesbury, the School had far more of the play, in fact at times it was marvellous how the forwards failed to put the ball into the goal.

Though the 1st XI. did not manage to win the majority of their matches, their captain, C. G. F. Hazell, displayed great keenness and enthusiasm in the leading of his team, and we all admired the sporting spirit in which he gave up his true position to play centre forward for the benefit of his side.

The 2nd XI. had a far more successful season than the 1st XI., and won all five matches; two of them were easy wins, but the other three were good hard tussles. Against the Old Shastonians (2nd XI.) the School were distinctly outweighed, but they had the advantage of having played together, and they were also faster on the ball; though the score 6-2 sounds as though the game was not a difficult one, they had to go all out to win.

Bournemouth School were good enough to put out a side of about equal weight, and in both these games the result was in doubt to the very end. In the second game, at Bournemouth, H. I. Gray scored both goals, the first a quick return from a goal kick, and the second well headed in from a centre by W. J. R. Dean. In addition to these two, L. A. T. Dennis at centre half, and W. F. Cox at right back, played well.

In the Under 14 eleven there are some very promising young players. Their three games were all won, though not easily; in fact, 13 goals to 9 just about indicates their superiority. In one match they had a rather heavy side to tackle, and though more than one member was heard to murmur against the size of his opponents, they managed to win; let us hope they learned the lesson that size is not everything in Soccer; a team which goes on the ground and is frightened by the size of the opponents is well on the way to losing the match!

The following played in all three matches:—H. F. Friend, who must learn to catch better and clear quicker; W. F. Cox and G. W. G. Buckland made a good pair of backs, and R. A. Welch and R. S. Balhatchet at half were both good, though somewhat slow in tackling. E. M. Barrett played well at outside right, but was a trifle slower than he was last season. P. W. Bull centres well, but must be prepared to tackle a back who is slow in clearing. A. Brickell has excellent ball control; but must learn to shoot quicker and not waste time in getting into position; the same applies to B. Hoddinott.

The football among those who had no matches showed a distinct improvement; this was obvious when watching junior house matches. There are two things which need attention. They are (1) learning to kick a ball with both left and right foot, and (2) learning to shoot at the first possible moment. The thanks of the lower clubs are due to D. A. Parham, J. C. Day and T. F. Andrews for the way in which they gave up their time to superintend games, particularly on Tuesdays and Fridays.

CHARACTERS OF THE FIRST ELEVEN.

F. J. P. SNOOK, Goal.—A much improved player; his catching is far safer, and his judgment good.

E. H. J. SOUTHON, Right-back.—His kicking was weak at the beginning of the season, but improved with each game. A very keen performer.

L. J. WILLIS, Left-back.—Played very well throughout the season; a fearless tackler, and a good kick.

E. THORNE, Right-half.—A good defender and hard worker; when he has learned more about constructive play, will make a very good player.

R. M. LAW, Centre-half.—A good worker and hard tackler; he used judgment in passing, but was slow in getting back after attack.

R. R. MATTHEWS, Left-half.—At the beginning of the season he showed promise of great things, and though he played well he did not quite live up to expectations. He passed with judgment, but was somewhat slow in recovery.

F. C. IMBER, Outside-right.—Was distinctly faster than any wing half he came up against, and used his speed to advantage; he takes the ball a little too close to the corner flag before centring.

R. J. GRAY, Inside-right.—A good worker, but lacks judgment as to the time to shoot and when to pass; he wasted quite a number of chances by trying to shoot from impossible angles.

- C. G. F. HAZELL (Captain), Centre-forward.—Came from right-back to fill a position that no-one else could; he improved with each game, and though he fed his wings nicely, was unable to make full use of their returns.
- W. E. THOMAS, Inside-left.—A hard worker; his trouble is lack of ball control; when he gains this, he should make a useful forward.
- D. H. TOVEY, Outside-left.—A much improved player, knows when to centre and when to shoot, though, when shooting with his right foot, he very frequently puts the ball over the bar.

CHARACTERS OF THE SECOND ELEVEN.

- W. H. F. T. GAUNTLETT, Goal.—Still suffers from inability to clear a ball properly; this is a great pity, as it may prevent his going further. Has good judgment and anticipation.
- W. F. COX, Right-back.—A good worker and kicks well with one foot; if he is to take his place in the first eleven he must learn to use both.
- C. T. ROWLAND, Left-back.—Works well and is fearless, though somewhat clumsy in his methods.
- F. A. CHUBB, Right-half.—Plays well in both attack and defence, though a little too deliberate in his movements.
- L. A. T. DENNIS, Centre-half.—Shows a good knowledge of a centre-half's play, and when he is stronger and quicker should make a good player.
- F. H. HUNT, Left-half.—Though not polished, has a happy knack of getting in an opponent's way, and generally manages to get the ball.
- I. J. BADGER, Outside-right.—A useful player; should keep the ball longer and not centre until he has reached his opponent's penalty area.
- H. I. GRAY, Centre-forward.—Rather slow, but has a good idea of what to do with the ball when he gets it.
- A. BRICKELL, Inside-left.—Has good ball control, but must learn when to keep and when to part; generally speaking he held on too long.
- W. J. R. DEAN, Outside-left.—A much improved player who did not realize his speed, and consequently failed to accept all his chances.

HOUSE FOOTBALL.

THE Senior competition was won by the Trojans, who were successful in two games and drew the remaining one, the Corinthians being second. The games were generally well contested, the winners being very little better than the Corinthians or Spartans.

In the Junior games the Spartans won all their games with the greatest of ease, and as each of the other Houses won one game, they share the one point given for second place! The "Spartanettes" were quite a good side; they scored no less than 27 goals in their three matches, and not once did their opponents penetrate their defence. It will be interesting to see how they fare in the Senior competition next winter.

The points thus gained for this year's Shield Competition are—Trojans 5 1-3rd (win in Senior, and bracketed 2nd in Junior), Corinthians 3 1-3rd (2nd in Senior, and bracketed 2nd in Junior), Spartans 3 (1st in Junior), Romans 1-3rd (bracketed 2nd in Junior).

The individual results were as follows:—

Trojans beat Romans	...	4-1	Spartans beat Corinthians	...	8-0
" " Spartans	...	1-0	" " Romans	...	11-0

TROJANS.

This year our senior team did not quite live up to the Trojan reputation. Lack of combination and weakness of defence were notable faults. Outstanding players were D. H. Tovey and R. M. Law, while a word of praise is due to the backs, who worked well under pressure. The junior team was also weaker this year, especially in defence. The best players were Alford, Arkell and W. Wakefield, all of whom scored one or more goals.

SENIOR TEAM.—W. H. F. T. Gauntlett (goal), R. S. Balhatchet and R. Light (backs), J. G. Hoddinott, R. M. Law and G. W. G. Buckland (halves), F. C. Imber, P. D. Law, D. H. Tovey, capt., J. A. Wakefield and L. H. R. Simmons (forwards).

JUNIOR TEAM.—S. T. J. Burr (goal), F. G. B. Young and L. C. Rogers (backs), J. L. Lyne, G. E. Alford and E. Combes, capt. (halves), H. H. Moore, W. Wakefield, C. G. S. Thomson, R. J. Arkell and S. E. Long (forwards).

CORINTHIANS.

Our results were not as good as those of last year, but were, on the whole, satisfactory. The senior team did not lose a match, but the juniors only won one. The senior defence was satisfactory, but the forwards were weak in front of goal. The junior team was patchy, but contained a few young players who ought to be quite good in a year or two.

SENIOR TEAM.—F. J. P. Snook (goal), C. G. F. Hazell, capt., and V. S. Balchin (backs), F. W. Coates, E. Thorne and F. J. Hunt (halves), E. M. Barrett, R. J. Gray, W. E. Thomas, F. E. Slater and T. F. Andrews (forwards).

JUNIOR TEAM.—P. J. Hoskins (goal), R. J. Davies and A. G. G. Harris (backs), J. W. Gardner, W. A. Stainer and T. G. Lock, capt. (halves), A. W. Harding, E. P. Hains, A. P. B. Brown, F. A. Parsons, and R. E. Hunt (forwards).

SPARTANS.

The senior team possessed a very sound defence, L. J. Willis at left-back and R. R. Matthews at centre-half being the most conspicuous players. The attack, however, was weak, although A. Brickell showed considerable promise. The junior team was one of the best we have ever had; the defence was sound, and the attack good.

SENIOR TEAM.—W. G. S. Holloway (goal), L. J. Willis and F. A. Chubb (backs), B. K. Johnson, R. R. Matthews & M. C. Holmes (halves), J. I. Badger, J. Fancott, capt., H. I. Gray, A. Brickell and J. N. Robertson (forwards).

JUNIOR TEAM.—C. A. Wales (goal), W. F. Cox and D. D. Rawlins (backs), A. W. Short, D. R. Young, capt. and P. F. Drew (halves), G. R. Rousell, T. A. Cordery, B. Hoddinott, R. A. Welch and G. C. Mitchell (forwards).

ROMANS.

The weakness of the senior team lay in the forward line; the defence was satisfactory, E. H. J. Southon and C. T. Rowland playing remarkably well at back. In the junior XI. there were some promising players, R. Heaton, B. G. Gyles and W. Garne being outstanding.

SENIOR TEAM.—H. F. Friend (goal), E. H. J. Southon and C. T. Rowland (backs), W. J. Langdon, L. A. T. Dennis and F. D. Hollick or O. G. N. Harris (halves), A. E. Mayhew, R. B. Shepard, W. J. R. Dean, capt., S. E. Dennis and L. J. Farris (forwards).

JUNIOR TEAM.—R. P. Jesse (goal), E. S. Mitchell and C. D. Clarke (backs), B. D. Aylwin, J. H. Ayles and K. G. A. Hibberd (halves), B. G. Gyles, capt., A. G. B. Gray, W. Garne, R. Heaton and P. W. Bull (forwards).

CADET CORPS.

The following have left the Corps:—Sgt. C. G. F. Hazell, Corpl. R. M. Law, Cadets J. W. Dean, W. J. Langdon, S. E. Dennis, J. G. Hoddinott, H. J. Southon, J. A. Wakefield, P. J. Hoskins, G. B. Garrett and J. W. Reeves; and we are very grateful for the excellent way in which they have always carried out their duties.

The chief outstanding event of last term was the receiving of the "Lucas Tooth" Shield. The competition for this was judged by Genl. Berners, in the summer term, and we just managed to beat Weymouth Grammar School (the holders) by about 5 marks. Marks were allotted for march past, steadiness, turnout, company and platoon drill, and rifle exercises; and the N.C.O.'s were complimented on the way they took charge and carried out their orders.

PROMOTIONS (1st Nov., 1928):—

To be Company Sgt.-Major—Sgt. R. Light.

PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.

OUR Annual Prize Distribution took place in the School Hall, on Thursday, Nov. 29th, with Mr. R. W. Borley in the chair, and we were favoured with a record attendance of Governors, parents and friends. The prizes were distributed by the Right Rev. Bishop Randolph, Dean of Salisbury, who afterwards gave one of the best addresses to boys it has been our lot to listen to. A charming mixture of sound common sense and delightful humour kept his audience enthralled, and we offer him our most grateful thanks for a visit which we can only hope was as pleasant to him as it was to us. We must also thank the many friends who presented prizes; we can assure them we all thoroughly appreciated their kindness.

The Chairman, in his opening remarks, referred to the great loss the school had sustained by the death of Mr. George Gordon, chairman of the Governors of the school, and paid an eloquent tribute to the great esteem in which the deceased gentleman had been held.

Dr. Tovey, in his report on the work of the school during the year, associated himself with all that had been said of the late Chairman of the Governors of the school. When he (Dr. Tovey) was appointed headmaster of the school, Mr. Gordon's advice was extraordinarily helpful. The school year, he said, could best be described as one of quiet and solid progress. Their numbers were the same as last year, but there was, owing to bad times, particularly in the agricultural industry, a tendency for boys to leave school too soon. This was bad for the school and worse for the boys. He was glad to say that the head boy of the school—H. M. Gale—had won a scholarship of thirty guineas, open to all England, at Faraday House Electrical College. The fifth form had, as usual, taken the school certificate examination. It was a small form, but in spite of that, they had passed as many boys as last year. Several promising boys were coming on, particularly in form IVB. The games were in a healthy condition, and they looked forward to a bright future. The fives courts were now in use, and it was their intention to start competitions, and also to arrange matches with other schools. The Cadet Corps, only a few days ago, had won the Lucas Tooth Shield, which was open for competition by cadets in secondary schools throughout the county. This was particularly gratifying as they had won it, so to speak, in their stride, as during the summer they had been extremely busy with other branches of school sports. Out of a possible 250 marks, the school obtained 193 marks, as against 191 scored by Weymouth. He desired to congratulate officers and cadets on an admirable performance. He offered his thanks to the staff for the great help they had given him. The school prided itself on its many interests outside the class-room, but without loyal co-operation of the staff, this would be impossible. There had recently been a newspaper discussion, inaugurated by the Headmaster of Harrow, as to the value of examinations. With much of what had been said, he (Dr. Tovey) was in hearty agreement, but he did not think the time had yet come when examinations could be abolished from our schools. Examinations were a useful incentive to work, and tended to bring out the grit that was in a boy, but examinations were not the most important part of a school curriculum. The development of character was of even more importance than the development of intellect. He desired, in conclusion, to tread for a moment the thorny path of finance. They had built the War Memorial Hall, and for that purpose had collected the sum of £4,000, chiefly in small amounts; but there was still a debt of £350, and as it was a war memorial, he felt this debt should be wiped out as soon as possible. They therefore proposed to make a special effort to do so, by means of two theatrical performances, and he appealed with confidence for support.

The Dean of Salisbury then presented prizes to the winners as follows:—

IIIA. Form.—T. G. Hart ...	...	"Machlin" Prize.

Amid continued applause, Sergts. R. Light and C. G. F. Hazell received from the Dean, on behalf of the Corps, the Lucas Tooth Shield, Dr. Tovey announcing that every member of the Corps on parade on the occasion of the inspection would receive a medal.

The Dean of Salisbury said the future of the school depended on them and what they did. In a way a school was like a factory; its work was the result of co-operative effort. All depended in the first instance on the raw material. Their parents were responsible for that, and the school and its staff worked the raw material up. But however good the headmaster and staff, the credit and efficiency of the school depended in the long run on the boys. In a factory the finished article left with a clear impression or mark on it, and a school left its distinctive mark upon the character of the boys. Yet he hoped his hearers would realise they were responsible for the individuality of the school. Wherever they went they needed to carry the "colour" the school had impressed upon them, and to let it be a "fast" colour. They came to school to have brought out what was in them. There was much of the animal in them—tiger, monkey, and donkey. These attributes had to be suppressed. Education meant the development of the good there was in us. It also gave a true idea of values. Had they ever thought how values changed as they progressed through life? They were at first content with toys. Then they thought that size counted, and then that brains counted for more. Then perhaps they looked for popularity, money and other things, but the one thing that really mattered was character, and to form the character that was to be of any use they needed the right ambition. A man without ambition or low ambition was of no use at all, and he would especially warn them against selfish ambition. He would urge them to have a high ambition, and to aim at usefulness. Usefulness was the rent we had to pay for the room we occupied in the world. The grand boast of the British Empire was not to be the mistress, but the servant of the world. So he put it to them that every boy leaving the school should have the ambition of usefulness; he should be like a good motor car, reliable, with good brakes, a good climber; he should be able to change gear without clatter and fuss, and go along smoothly, swiftly, and noiselessly, to a definite goal, remembering that good temper made the machinery of life run smoothly.

Mr. Borley, proposing a vote of thanks to the Dean, said it had been a great pleasure to all to hear such a delightful address, and he trusted the Dean would be spared to visit them again in the near future.—The Rev. N. S. Lawrie seconded, and the Dean, in reply, said he was grateful for the kind welcome they had given the "new boy." (Laughter.)

The Mayor, in proposing a vote of thanks to Dr. Tovey and the staff, said it was a great pleasure to him, as an old boy of the school, to do so. He felt that much of the school's success was due to the great help that Mrs. Tovey had also given. Equally the townspeople could congratulate themselves on being so fortunate in their headmaster and the staff.—Mr. E. Johnson, in seconding, said that Dr. Tovey and the staff had raised the school to an excellent standard and kept it there.

The Rev. H. Coley and Mr. A. Parsons were associated in a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and in reply, Mr. Borley said the school was the greatest possible asset to the town, and second to none in the county.—Cheers for the Dean and the Chairman terminated the proceedings.

DEBATING SOCIETY.

D. H. Tovey was President of the Society last term, and R. M. Law, Vice-President. J. Fancott was Honorary Secretary, and C. G. F. Hazell and Mr. Stewart completed the Committee. A number of interesting debates were held, but the Committee found some difficulty in selecting subjects for debate, and it would greatly welcome suggestions. Difficulty was found, too, in obtaining speakers. There are still members of the society who have yet to make their maiden speech. If everyone would be willing to speak at least once a term, it would help the Committee considerably in its task of providing interesting debates.

The following debates were held:—

October 18th, "That this House views with regret the ever increasing activities of some daily newspapers."—Rejected.

Proposed by F. W. Coates.

Opposed by E. H. J. Southon.

Seconded by W. J. Langdon.

Seconded by F. D. Hollick.

November 9th, "That the British people are too fond of sport."—Rejected.

Proposed by C. G. F. Hazell.

Opposed by R. M. Law.

Seconded by E. H. J. Southon.

Seconded by D. A. Parham.

November 16th, "That this House favours a policy of liberal education for all subject races, irrespective of race or colour."—Rejected.

Proposed by D. A. Parham.

Opposed by Mr. Scalbert.

Seconded by Mr. Stewart.

Seconded by Mr. Minchin.

November 30th.—Two minute speeches were given by a number of speakers on a variety of subjects, some humorous, some serious.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT.

INSTEAD of our usual Concert, we produced a Three-act Play on December 17th and 18th. "Ask Beccles," a crook play, which had a successful London run in 1926, was presented before very full houses, and our Memorial Hall Fund was augmented by about £38, for some of which we have to thank several generous donors.

The action of the play centres round the theft of a very valuable diamond belonging to Mrs. Rivers, a rich widow who is a paying guest at Sir James Holforth's, of Hollesley Hall. Eustace Beccles, a friend of Holforth's, ostensibly running an information bureau, but in reality a "gentleman crook," adroitly substitutes a paste diamond for the real one, which he conceals in a hollow golf-ball. Falling in love with Sir James's daughter, Marion, he decides to "run straight," and during a carefully engineered failure of the electric light, contrives to restore the real diamond in place of the paste one. Inspector Daniels, of Scotland Yard, though strongly suspecting Beccles, is baffled on account of the appearance on the scene of Matthew Blaze, the head of a ruthless gang of thieves, who, after a terrific struggle with Beccles, gets away with the false diamond, only to be shot in the grounds of the Hall, during a desperate encounter with the police. Interwoven with the main theme is a subsidiary plot in which Sir Frederick Boyne, a friend of Beccles, tries by a trick to secure the mortgage on the Hall, in order to force Marion to marry him.

Mr. L. P. V. Veale, as Beccles, sustained a long and difficult part in a very able manner. The various phases of the plot all pivoted around him, and on the manner in which he carried off each situation the success of the play depended. How successful his efforts were may be judged by the appreciation of the audience. Whether making love, thieving, fighting, or outwitting the police, he was always quite convincing.

Mr. R. L. Stewart, as Sir Frederick Boyne, a friend of Beccles, made a splendid foil, and the subtle way in which he engineered his villainous schemes formed a well thought-out piece of character acting.

Mr. R. B. Minchin played the part of Sir James Holforth, and, whether bewildered, or angry at the mysterious happenings in his house, was always very convincing.

Mr. L. J. Cole gave a very finished rendering of Inspector Daniels, his conversational duels with Beccles being very dramatic and tense—a clever character interpretation.

Mr. W. D. Coleman took the part of Matthew Blaze, and gave us a very thrilling study of the underworld, his fights with Beccles to secure the diamond being very realistic.

W. H. F. Gauntlett as a callous youth who was in love with Mrs. Rivers, and whose idea of work was playing the the saxophone, carried out his role quite well.

The part of Mrs. Rivers, the rich middle-aged widow and owner of the diamond, was entrusted to the safe hands of R. M. Law, and he cleverly portrayed the character of this ostentatious lady (sic.) from Wapping.

E. P. Hains as Marion, Sir James's daughter, looked very sweet, and gave a very good rendering, the love scene with Beccles being very successful.

Among the minor parts, L. A. T. Dennis as the Chinese servant of Beccles, gave us a character study worthy of many an experienced actor. He was always mysterious and crafty in his ways, and his command of "pidgin" English was excellent.

C. G. F. Hazell as the butler, and F. W. Coates and C. T. Rowland as village constables, were all quite adequate in their parts.

S. E. Dennis deserves our thanks for taking up the part of Marion at very short notice, owing to the indisposition of E. P. Hains on the second night.

We are also very grateful to Mr. Watmough and his helpers for the excellent stage and scenery provided, and also to Mr. G. Norton (o.s.) for lighting effects.

OLD SHASTONIAN DINNER.

THE Seventh Annual Dinner was held at the Waldorf Hotel, London, on Saturday, November 3rd. Admiral H. Seymour Hall, C.B.E., presided over a gathering of about sixty Club members and a few guests, and a most enjoyable evening was spent in surroundings which were admirably suited to an occasion of this sort.

In addition to our Chairman, there were present Dr. C. H. Tovey, Dr. C. A. Ensor, Dr. H. F. S. Blucke, Dr. G. W. Cheater, Lieut. Hall, Messrs. W. Ramshaw, R. B. Minchin, R. L. Stewart, H. J. Tovey, D. Summers and his father, C. S. Balhatchet, F. W. Clarke, R. Geyton, C. F. I. Phillips, K. S. Law, A. J. Wescott, J. H. Wescott, J. N. Wescott, J. W. New, J. O. Woodford, R. N. Tayler, D. T. Sutton, H. W. Tovey, W. D. Coleman, E. H. Simpson, G. F. Simpson, A. N. Targett, R. H. M. Stirling, F. C. Innocent, T. S. Law, L. B. Law, R. K. Brett, A. J. Sharpe, J. Icke, W. Doggrell, H. M. Gale, H. J. Hughes, E. L. Hesse, A. J. Baxter, A. G. Egremont, H. F. Jackson, J. Powney, H. F. Bathurst Brown, T. A. B. Webb, W. J. Squire, B. G. Young, M. C. W. Johnson, R. J. Jesse, J. H. McLachlan, W. K. Sankey, D. G. Longmore, J. R. Galwey, A. J. Webb and F. H. Fletcher.

During the evening, Admiral Hall, on behalf of the members of the O. S. Club, presented to Dr. and Mrs. Tovey a solid silver tea-tray and an illuminated scroll of the subscribers, to commemorate the occasion of their Silver Wedding.

The Chairman, proposing the toast of the School, said that three years ago when he left the Navy, he went to Shaftesbury to see the old school after an interval of 40 years. He was never more astonished in his life than at the change which had come over it. He thought there were only two others there that night who were at the school in the early eighties. In those days the only pavilion out of doors was a shed which was now the workshop, and the cricket pitch was the centre of a small cutting in the meadow. There were then twelve boarders and about sixty day boys. The progress of the school was indicated by the fine new buildings, the extension of the playing fields, and the fact that there were now a hundred boarders. That was a great comparison with the old days, when there was only one class-room, one back yard, and one cow shed. When the enquiry was made as to how all this had been done, from all sides came the answer that it was due to Dr. and Mrs. Tovey. He could not help being impressed by the morale of the school, and at the esprit de corps shown at all the games, and at the way the senior boys came up and talked with confidence and respect to their Masters. That proved what the tone of the School had become during Dr. Tovey's 21 years of headmastership. In handing the gifts to Dr. Tovey, Admiral Seymour Hall remarked that the Headmaster should be a proud man to have gained the love and respect of all who had been under him.

Dr. Tovey, in reply, thanked them on behalf of Mrs. Tovey and himself from the bottom of his heart for the very handsome and delightful present they had just given them, and asked to be allowed to add a special word of thanks to Messrs. K. G. Law, R. G. Scott and R. B. Minchin for the great trouble they had gone to in organising it. He assured them that in future Mrs. Tovey would take tea—her favourite meal—with an added pleasure, while he himself hoped to spend many hours of ease in perusing the names on the charming scroll. They would bring back many delightful memories of their school life together, and some, possibly, of a less delightful nature, when they had, metaphorically, to take tea with him in his study. He was sure they would say that that remark did not apply to any of them, but they must remember that none of us always get our deserts. His heart, he said, was too full for words to flow easily, and having thanked them for their gifts in a very feeble and inadequate manner, he thought the best thing he could do was to sit down, except that he did not wish them to infer from the fewness of his words that he at all under-rated their great kindness. Furthermore, there was an old adage beginning "speech is silver," and as, by their great kindness, his wife and he were celebrating their silver wedding that night, they might consider they had a right to claim the equivalent in silver in the shape of a speech.

1928 would ever be a memorable year for him, as not only did it mark the 25th anniversary of the best thing he ever did in his life, but it marked also his coming of age as headmaster of their school. From the kind words written on the scroll, he gathered that they were not disappointed at what his wife and he had attempted to do at Shaftesbury. They began in faith, they continued in hope (possibilities became probabilities, probabilities became certainties), and now they lived in love, the love that bound them all together for the good of one common cause—the School. He was perfectly aware that during all those years he had made many mistakes, but hoped he might plead that they had been mistakes of detail rather than of principle, and remarked that the silver lining to the cloud that overshadowed those mistakes, was the knowledge that the man who had never made a mistake had yet to be born.

Dr. Tovey then said that he thought the work and games of the school were on the up-grade; he referred to the success of the Cadet Corps, and expressed his thanks to Howard Spry for presenting a "fives" cup for annual competition. Continuing, he said that no mention of the School's success would be complete without a tribute to the unwearying efforts of the masters. There were, as they knew, many activities that went to make up the corporate life of a school, but they were fortunate in having men on their staff who delighted to offer a helping hand, and he was most grateful to them for their unsparing efforts. Of the future of the school he could say but little. He was often asked when he was going to retire, and the answer he always gave was that he had not the least idea. "Man proposes, God disposes." He still felt young enough to do his work, and provided he had health and strength, provided he retained the confidence of his Governors and the support and affection of his old boys, he really saw no reason why he should not continue to work for the school for some few years longer.

It was the fashion of the hour to decry enthusiasm as bad form, and he was not going to say there was not such a thing as being over-enthusiastic; but on one point he felt certain, and that was that the errors of enthusiasm were far less than the errors of indifference. He feared they had been over-enthusiastic that night as regarded his wife and himself. Their gift would, he hoped, be handed down in their family to generations yet unborn, as a living proof of what enthusiasm and good feeling could do, and it was his earnest hope and prayer that he might day by day grow more worthy of their School, that day by day his old boys might also grow more worthy of their School, and that day by day their School might grow more worthy of them. Linked together as Shastonians by a common bond of sympathy, this feeling of enthusiasm would unite them to the end of their lives, and nothing on earth would be able to sever the chain that bound them. May their school, he concluded, continue to turn out honorable men, hard workers, good sportsmen, and may its good name last for ever.

Dr. H. F. S. Blucke, in proposing the toast of "The Club," spoke of its value in perpetuating old friendships, and in encouraging that sympathy and helpfulness which should exist among friends. He spoke also of the development of the school, remarking that he did not know where its progress was going to stop as long as they had Dr. Tovey as headmaster. He coupled with the toast the name of Mr. R. B. Minchin, who had done so much for the Club,

Mr. Minchin, replying, said that the Club was entering the tenth year of its existence with a membership of 300, of whom no less than 180 were life members. The finances were in a sound condition, and he hoped that when the funds had reached a certain figure, the Club would be able to do something for the School. During the early part of August, 1929, after a lapse of two years, the Club was sending a touring cricket team down to the South Coast, and he hoped that as many members as possible would come. Having referred to the deaths of two Old Shastonians during the past year, he ended by expressing his indebtedness to Mr. K. S. Law and Mr. R. G. Scott for all the work they had done in connection with the Silver Wedding Presentation Fund.

Mr. F. C. Innocent proposed the toast of "Absent Members," referring feelingly to the sacrifice of those who died in the war.

During the evening, songs were sung by Dr. Tovey and Messrs. K. S. Sankey, J. Icke, D. T. Sutton and J. N. Wescott.

THROUGH THE PANAMA CANAL.

ARRIVING at Colon, we stopped to pick up a pilot and a crew of West Indian negroes, whose duty it was to work the ship through the Canal. After a short journey we arrived at the Gatun Locks, which raised the ship 90 feet in three lifts of 30 feet each. Big electric locomotives, called "mules," towed the ship through.

From the Locks we proceeded to the Gatun Lake, which is a flooded forest where the tops of the trees could be seen sticking up above the surface of the water. The air was full of the cries of birds and animals which inhabit the forest bordering the canal.

Beyond the lake the passage narrowed considerably, and it was possible to distinguish the scaly forms of alligators which were basking in the sun at the edge of the water. This was not always easy to do, because, when perfectly still, their bodies resembled the long brown rotting tree trunks which had fallen on the mudbanks.

The next point of interest was the Culebra Cut, where there is a memorial in the side of the cliff erected to the memory of the men who died during its construction, and who are buried on the top of the cliff.

At the Pedro Miguel Locks started the descent to the Pacific, and electric mules again towed us through. There are two locks here, and two more—called the Miraflores Locks—further down the canal. A short distance from this point stands the town of Balboa, a native settlement and coaling station. Trams run out from here to Panama, which is a fairly large city, but whose streets are so narrow, dark and dirty, and whose inhabitants are so unprepossessing, that I was indeed glad to return to my ship and the healthier smell of the open sea.

GEOFFREY WEST.

O.S. CLUB.

The tenth Annual General Meeting was held in the Memorial Hall, on Wednesday, Nov. 14th, with Mr. Ramshaw (in the absence of Admiral Hall) in the chair. The balance sheet was considered satisfactory and adopted, Mr. Minchin pointing out the fact that the publication of a new membership book had added considerably to the year's expenses.
